...technology available to people with disabilities could trigger greater accessibility to Internet streamed programming through closed captioning, officials from WordWave said Thurs. Standards -- issued Dec. 21 by Access Board, independent federal agency...

...by braille reader, providing text-search capabilities for people who can't hear, or using closed captioning similar to what's been used on TV for years, he said.

Closed - captioning isn't just for people with disabilities, WordWave Div. Pres. Larry Schwartz said. Although it...

...impaired, he said, it's now used regularly in gyms, bars and other places. Internet closed captioning, Roberts said, lets workers turn down audio on their computers and search text of streamed...

...company also provides subtitling, so transcribed audio or video programs also can be translated into foreign languages, he said, must for "worldwide medium" of Internet.

New govt. regulations will likely trickle down to private sector, officials said. Broadcasters initially resisted closed - captioning, said Roberts, but in cyberspace, there's expectation that there will be voice -to- text capabilities. As govt. Web sites become more accessible, private sector sites will see value of...
